BAKED MEATS OF THE FUNERAL. A COLLECTION OF Ea-sars, PORMS, SPENGERS, HISTORIES AND BANQUETS. By Private Miles Of Reiby (Co. C. G. Halpins). New-York: Certoon. Col. Halpine, known over the country as the irrepressible Miles O Reilly, is one of the men who never write dall books. His present volume with quaint title is merely a collection of his recent contributions to the newspapers. Mr. Carloton, seemingly assious that his baked meats should be really cold, has given us the book without table of contents or index, which we take to be a very victous thing on the part of a publisher, and showing the absence of a true business tact. The book has many good things, with, parlians, a little too much of The New-York Herald. The "Banquet to our Heroes," a burlesque dinner party, with speeches from John Van Buren, General Anderson, General Dix (much Latinized), a song from Governor Andrew, and a funny note from Mr. Stanton, is capital reading even now. The "Anthem of Peace" which it contains is worthy of a better setting.

We have also the "Song of the Soldier," one of Col. Halpine's most touching lyries, given as a translation from the Latin after the manner of Father Prout. The "New Movement against Grant" relates to a subject so old now that its interest is dead, and it might have been omitted, but for a very lusty, charming song called "Wintor Quarters."

Comrades, hear the hollow meaning
Of the tempest o'er the mold;
Earth is white with fright and groaning
In the cold.
Some there be, perchance, who wander
Shivering, houseless, leveless, lone;
These are thoughts to make us fonder
Of our own!"

The poem "Not Quite in Vain," the verses "My Private Heaven," supposed to be written by Theodore Tilton, and the "Song of Sherman's Way" are rich in sentiment, humor and feeling. In fact, the best things in the book are Col. Halpine's poems, and they lead us to hope that he will keep his promise and give us a volume of them very

THE BOOK OF ROSES. By FRANCIS PARSMAN. Sec., pp. 215.

The style of this volume is worthy the subject upon which it treats. It would not put a beautiful bouquet of roses to the blush if placed side by side upon the same table. Amateurs will find all the information necessary in regard to the culture, propagation, and character of the rose, with ample description of varieties, and their respect-Ive habits, to enable them to make suitable selections for all situations. At the end of the volume 23 pages are filled with a catalogue of the names of roses in addition to those named in the body of the work. There is also a complete list of new roses; and, as a whole, we earnestly commend the book to all lovers of the Queen of Flowers.

FIE GALAXY. AN ILLUSTRATED MAGARINE. Published Fort-eightly. American News Company. General Agent. The second number of this new magazine appears promptly, and with 16 pages added. The serial taleswhich are well-chosen reprints from English magazinesare, of course, continued. The rest of the number is made up of original articles, prose and verse, and among the authors we notice some well known names, as Rose Terry, Edmund C. Stedman and others. The Galaxy is wise in attaching the names of writers to its articles, for a magazine cannot and should not try to be impersonal. It is not less wise in not announcing a long list of contributors Nobody ever believes in it, nor is it often true. The better way is to trust for its literary reputation to the writers in each number. The Galaxy chooses wisely in adopting such a system. Carleton has issued a translation by Mr. Charles E

Wilbour of Victor Hugo's first novel, "Jargal," a version of which appeared in this country some 20 years ago under the name of "Bug-Jargal." The original work was composed in 1818, when the author was 16 years old, in fulfillment of a wager that he would write a book in a fortnight, and naturally betrays the faults incident to haste and in experience, though it is interesting as the first manifestation of a genius which has since become so splendid. It is founded upon the revolt of the negroes of San Domingo

Carleton has also published "Adrift in Dixie; Or, a Yankee Officer among the Rebels," with an introduction by Edmund Kirke; a simple and interesting narrative of the escape from captivity of a young Massachusetts Lieutenant, and his 40 days' wanderings and adventures in the Rebel country, during which he was constantly helped and protected by the blacks; "Recommended to Mercy," a eprint of an English novel; and a practical handy-book on "Epidemic Cholern," for the use especially of apothecaries, nurses, agents of sanitary commissions, public

Hurd & Houghton have prepared in a portly volume "The Poetical Works of Thomas Hood," embracing all the poems published in the Moxon collections of the author's entimental and humorous verse, and in the four volumes of the Boston edition. The type is large and clear, and the paper, binding and general mechanical execution are worthy of all praise.

Charles Scribner & Co. have just published the 5th and tory of England from the Fall of Wolsey to the Death of Elizabeth," bringing the narrative down to the death of Queen Mary in 1558. These two volumes, covering a pe riod of Il years, and embracing the reigns of Edward VI. and Mary, are crowded with stirring events, upon which Mr. Froude has lavished all the resources of his pic-

JOHN BRADBURN, No. 107 Nassau-st.

JOHN BRADBURN, No. 107 Nassau st.

Enone, a Tale of Slave Life in Rome, is a marked and entertaining book. It is a tale of love and jealousy among the Romane in the time of Titus Versusian and the Roman General Sergius Vanno, a Patrolan of the first family, with his wrife and his two slaves, which form the center of the laterest. The style is stately and classic, and much like the interiorial novels of Bollwer. Moune of the descriptions are extremely graphic, and evince a remarkable power of the author. The character are drawn with great vividness and truthfulness. The piot is novel and ingenious and pleasingly developed.
